

NESBITS AUCTIONS

IN ASSOCIATION WITH

THE Cilla Black COLLECTION

FRIDAY 28TH NOVEMBER 2025

"The clothes and outfits presented in this collection represent a life well lived, on the stage and in front of the TV cameras. It's fair to say that almost every item in this collection was either worn on stage or appeared on TV, in such shows as the BBC's "Cilla", "Blind Date" and "Surprise Surprise"

Once we had sold The Grove, our family home, all the clothes were kept in storage.

My brothers and I felt that the right thing to do now, ten years after our mother's passing, was to donate the collection to the Variety Club, a wonderful charity which does so many good works, and one which our mother happily supported during her lifetime. She was, of course, extremely proud of the numerous Variety Clubs awards she was presented with over the years.

We sincerely hope that making her collection available to the public will enable them to have something of Cilla's that played a role in her career, and to ultimately benefit many worthy causes."

— Robert Wills, son of Cilla Black

Jean Varon was the fashion label of British designer John Bates (1935 - 2022). Bates was a style pioneer, who is sometimes credited with having invented the miniskirt. He designed many recognisable garments of the 1960s, including for Diana Rigg in 'The Avengers' (the black leather catsuit being the most notable) and Julie Christie in 'Shampoo'.

John had a close association with Cilla Black. She acted as model for him during the late 1960s. Bates was selected as the designer for her iconic church wedding dress worn in March 1969. He additionally designed many of the outfits for Cilla worn during the late 1960s, particularly visible on the 'Cilla' show.
